As we all know the internet is a space where you can find everything you want, you can ask about whatever you want but also you can learn new things and use them for example in social interactions and home duties.
There are also plenty of threats that can cause serious problems but if you will use the internet wisely it can have a really good impact on your life.

Not so long ago if you wanted to sell your clothes you needed to organise something like a garage sale or just give them to someone from your family and friends. Now it’s way easier because there is an app which allows you to sell your things without extra payments.And what’s more you receive the purchase that you set before putting those products on sale!
That’s an amazing opportunity to make some money through the internet.
Size and any other dimensions won’t be a problem because every detail about the thing you sell needs to be put in your sale announcement like size, length of legs or sleeves, width of hips or bust etc. Not only is it easily accessible and user-friendly, but it is also very detailed.

If you do something well and you are sure about it, why not share it with an audience? On the internet there are profiles, especially on tik tok which content is based on tutorials. Those tutorials are meant to help people and improve their skills in various fields.

One of them is polish cooker Ewa Szczęsna who shares her recipes with her tik tok community and shows how to use them. Her experience is legit because she was once in the MasterChef and even has her own book about cooking.
The next profile - @flawia.sprzata is about hacks cleaning but also the owner of this profile Flawia Drążczyk shows many ways to motivate yourself to clean your house and not live in a mess. She also wrote it all in her eBook.

Of course there are more profiles like that but not every profile can be reliable and based on real experience so it’s important to stay careful while watching internet tutorials
